

Draper Notes

November 10, 2014

Thank You, Superintendent

At a past school board meeting, the superintendent made a rather strange public presentation regarding her speculations on the identities of some individuals making public records requests through her office. Surely the superintendent is aware, according to Florida Law, that an individual requesting a public record is not even required to reveal their identity. With this superintendent, when someone does provide an identity, expensive taxpayer time is spent on speculation about if these identities are real. Too much time is wasted on the wrong priorities by the superintendent that does not improve student achievement in this school district.

Since her public comments at a school board meeting, the traffic to this website has quadrupled. A special thanks to the superintendent for this rather dramatic increase.